WSU Graduate Student and Faculty Tour Horticulture and Landscape Architecture Department

Six WSU graduate students, and two faculty leaders toured WSU Puyallup this week. The purpose of the tour was to familiarize new graduate students and faculty members in the Horticulture and Landscape Architecture Department with the diverse crops and growing conditions found in Washington State. The tour also gave the new students and faculty an introduction to the College's off campus facilities and a chance to meet with off campus faculty and staff and learn about their research and extension programs. In addition to touring WSU Puyallup, the tour group began in Pullman and had scheduled tours of the Othello Research Unit, the Tree Fruit Research and Extension Center in Wenatchee, the Northwest Washington Research and Extension Center in Mount Vernon, and the Irrigated Agriculture Research and Extension Center in Prosser.
